

Please do not allow the CBA to usurp the Indiana Privacy Law regarding telephone contact under the guise of "established business relationships". This is a not-so-veiled attempt to open Indiana homes to thousands of unwanted telemarketing calls for these institutions' new services. As a telecommunications professional, I can also assure you it would hurt many telecommunications companies land line services. People who are faced with a bombardment of sales calls will quite willingly shut off their land line service in preference of cellular service just to avoid these unwanted calls. To bypass the privacy laws in Indiana is a bad move for everyone EXCEPT the financial institutions who are lobbying for it.
